Directory of Domestic Violence Programs Serving Muslim Communities

Introduction

This Directory of Domestic Violence Programs Serving Muslim Communities is compiled by the Asian & Pacific Islander Institute on Domestic Violence (API Institute) in collaboration with Peaceful Families Project. The API Institute is a resource center on violence against women from Asian, Native Hawaiian and Pacific Islander communities. We have undertaken this project since many Muslims in the U.S. come from various regions in Asia. We have attempted to be as systematic as possible, to include organizations serving Muslim women, immigrant and refugee women from the Middle East and Central, East, South, Southeast, and West Asia. We have not systematically been able to list resources for African American Muslims (i.e., indigenous Muslims) or refugees from Africa (e.g., Somalis) and Europe (e.g., Bosnians). In general, all women can access the resources listed below.

Who is this Directory for?

- Muslim victims/survivors of domestic violence.
- Service providers and advocates who assist abused Muslim women.
- Organizations serving Muslim women, immigrant and refugee women from the Middle East and Central, East, South, Southeast, and West Asia.
- Organizations serving abused women from Arab, South Asian, and other Asian communities.
- National organizations that address domestic violence and gender issues in Muslim communities.

Identities

Notions of identity carry complex political, social, and familial meanings. The following terms are used in this directory and defined for clarity only and not to force anyone into a particular regional and ethnic grouping. Self-identification is appropriately a matter of individual decision.

- Arab, Middle Eastern, West Asian refers to people from the Middle East, also called West Asia and includes peoples who trace their origins to the countries, diasporas and/or ethnicities of these regions.
- Asian includes peoples of Central Asian, East Asian, Southeast Asian, South Asian, and West Asian ancestry, i.e., those who trace their origins to the countries, diasporas and/or ethnicities of the above regions.
- Muslim, which includes the Sunni and Shia' sects, refers to people who self-identify, culturally or religiously (whether they are practicing or not), as Muslims.
- Not all Arabs are Muslims. They can be Christians, Druze, Baha'is, or Jews. Christian sects in the Middle East include Antiochian Orthodox, Assyrian, Chaldean, Coptic, Greek Catholic, Greek Orthodox, Maronite, Melkite, Roman Catholic, Syrian Catholic, and Syrian Orthodox.
- Not all West Asians, such as Iranians/Persians and Turks, are Arabs.

An Explanation about some Program Categories

- Arab-specific programs: Agencies that explicitly, but not exclusively, serve abused Arab women; have Arab advocates; and/or have staff trained to work with Arab domestic violence victims/survivors.
- Domestic violence shelter and 24-hour hotline: Immediate response time, including weekends. Shelter-based services include housing and extensive support services for domestic violence survivors and their children; time limited stay.
- Domestic violence support services and help-line: Response time is not immediate. Programs provide emotional support; referrals to social and legal services; case management; accompaniment; and other types of assistance.
- I&R: Information & Referral (on-line and telephonic): Information and resources about violence against Muslim women. Referrals to Muslim victims/survivors of domestic violence for culturally-appropriate social and legal services.
- Muslim-specific programs: Agencies that explicitly, but not exclusively, serve abused Muslim women and communities; have Muslim advocates; and/or have staff trained to work with Muslim domestic violence victims/survivors and communities. Includes organizations providing information on Muslim cultural issues and violence against Muslim women.
- National organizations: Provide information, technical assistance and training for domestic violence advocates, community organizers and others.
- South Asian programs: Agencies that serve Bangladeshi, Bhutanese, Indian, Nepali, Pakistani, and Sri Lankan abused women, and that may or may not have the capacity to serve Muslim women.
